There is something fishy about the Senior Pastor. Quite literally as I am now the recipient of seven fish skin grafts applied to an open wound on my leg. Come to find out the cells of Atlantic codfish skin closely resemble the cells of human skin. When the fish cells dissolve into a human's body, they provide a structure upon which human cells can grow. Who knew? How amazing is this?

The donated fish skin grafts I received are working. The bed of my wound is nearly filled with what the doctor calls granular tissue. My repaired Achilles tendon that was once exposed because the incision opened, is now nearly covered with tissue. Wow! Woohoo! Wonderful!

I am having to dig deep for patience though as a very slow part of the process is for skin to grow and close the wound. I still cannot put any weight on my right foot nor get it wet. At my last visit with the wound doctor, he shared his ongoing confidence that skin will grow, the wound will heal, physical therapy will come, and I will walk again. He explained that there are no specific timelines for this kind of healing. Every person's body heals at its own pace and mine is very slow.

This journey reminds me how grateful I am for the gift of relationship. I pray I am a life-giving partner in relationship with ...

Charles who is my driver, knee scooter repair person, nurse, and soul mate.

God who regardless of any timeline, offers comfort and strength.

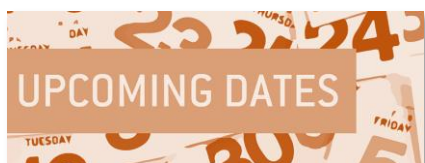

Jesus who came to teach and live God's extravagant love for the world.

A family of faith who shares life in all its fullness and gives gifts because they are inspired, not required, to offer mutual care.

Family members and friends who love. Period.

Doctors, nurses, and healthcare providers, who use their knowledge and skills for the wellbeing of God's people.

Creation, the earth, animals, birds of the air, and, of course, fish of the sea.

This Fall, our church family has taken time to celebrate the legacy and learn more about the rich culture of those indigenous peoples who originally inhabited the land where our church structure is located. SGLCC(DOC) is located within the boundaries of the Cherokee Nation. The state of Oklahoma is home to 39 distinct Native American tribes. Their stories are told through a series of beautiful exhibits in the new First Americans Museum in Oklahoma City. On October 17th members of our congregation joined with members of the First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) of Claremore to tour the facility which is designed in collaboration with the tribes of Oklahoma and the Smithsonian Museum. Our day began with a tasty brunch in the museum's restaurant. The Native American menu featured indigenous recipes made with ingredients native to Oklahoma. We sampled bison burgers and blue corn pancakes with agave syrup. Our tour of the galleries was led by a retired professor from the University of Oklahoma.

Disciples Women Fall Retreat

ThanksLIVING in November & always, in all ways!

November is a season of thankfulness. Pastor Gina suggested that we post what we are thankful for on this lovely tree painted by Teena Momper in the church lobby. If you can't pin a leaf in person, you can post your gratefuls on the SGLCC Live facebook page. We are also invited by Gina to list 5 details about WHY you feel grateful.
